

Bella
& the Stars

Bryana Reardon

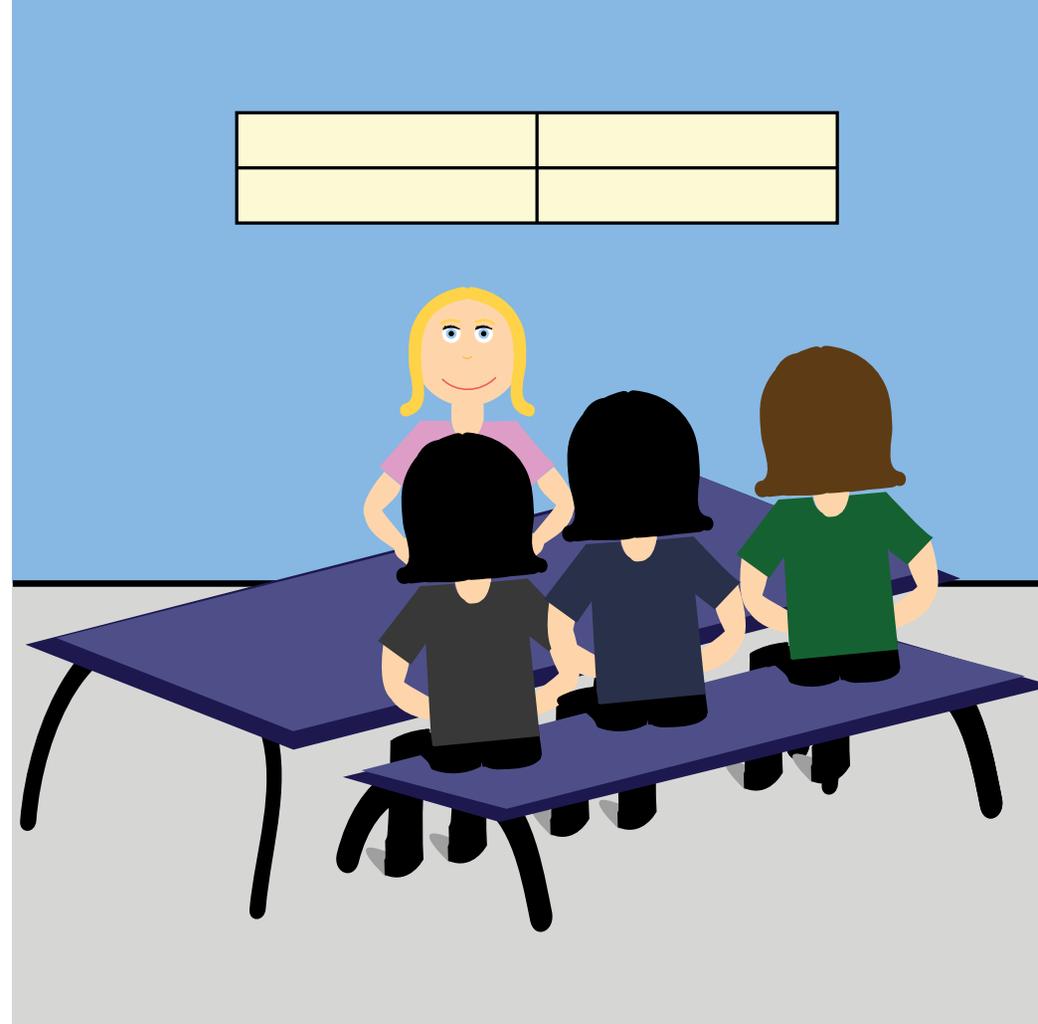

In a small town called Bridgetown, a girl named Bella has just moved to town and is new. She is starting her first day of school at Bridgetown Junior High School.

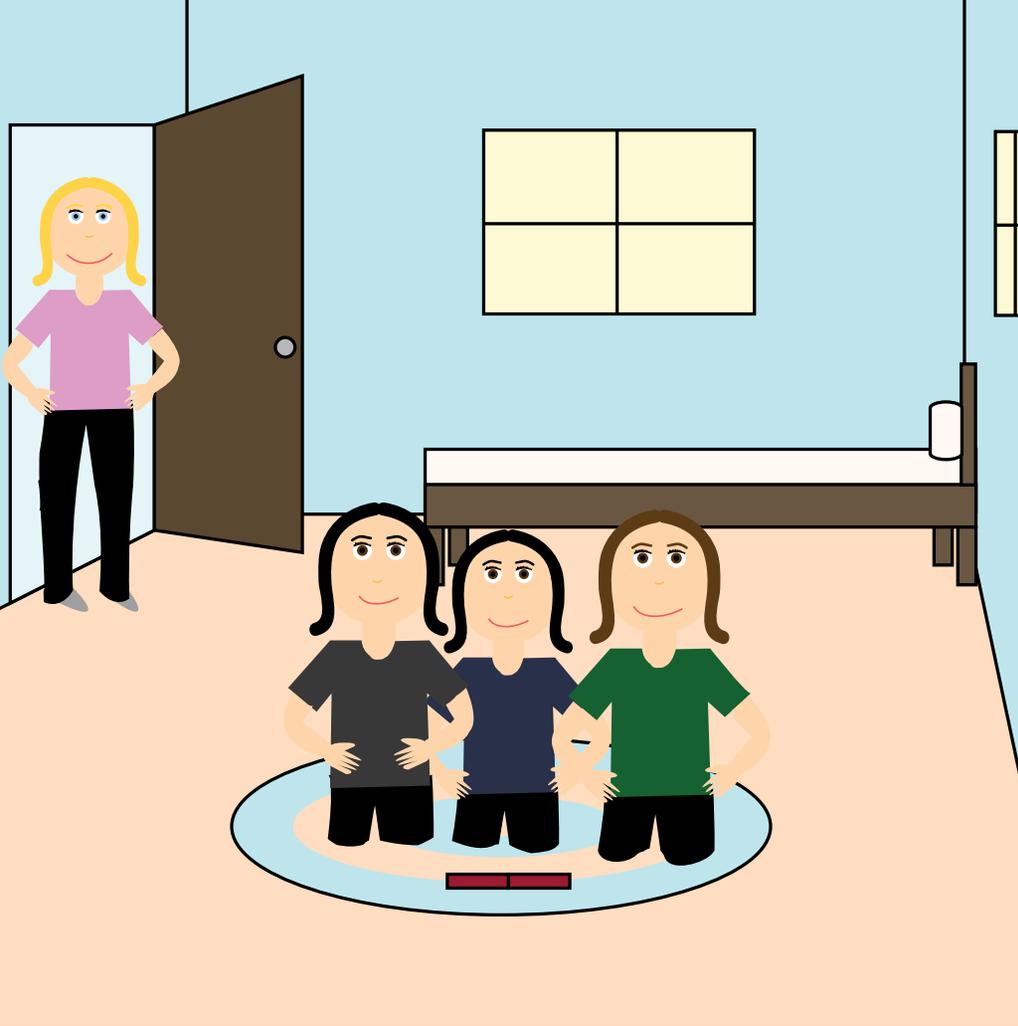

Bella walks through the halls alone. She is too shy to make new friends. She spots three girls in the corner and walks over to them.

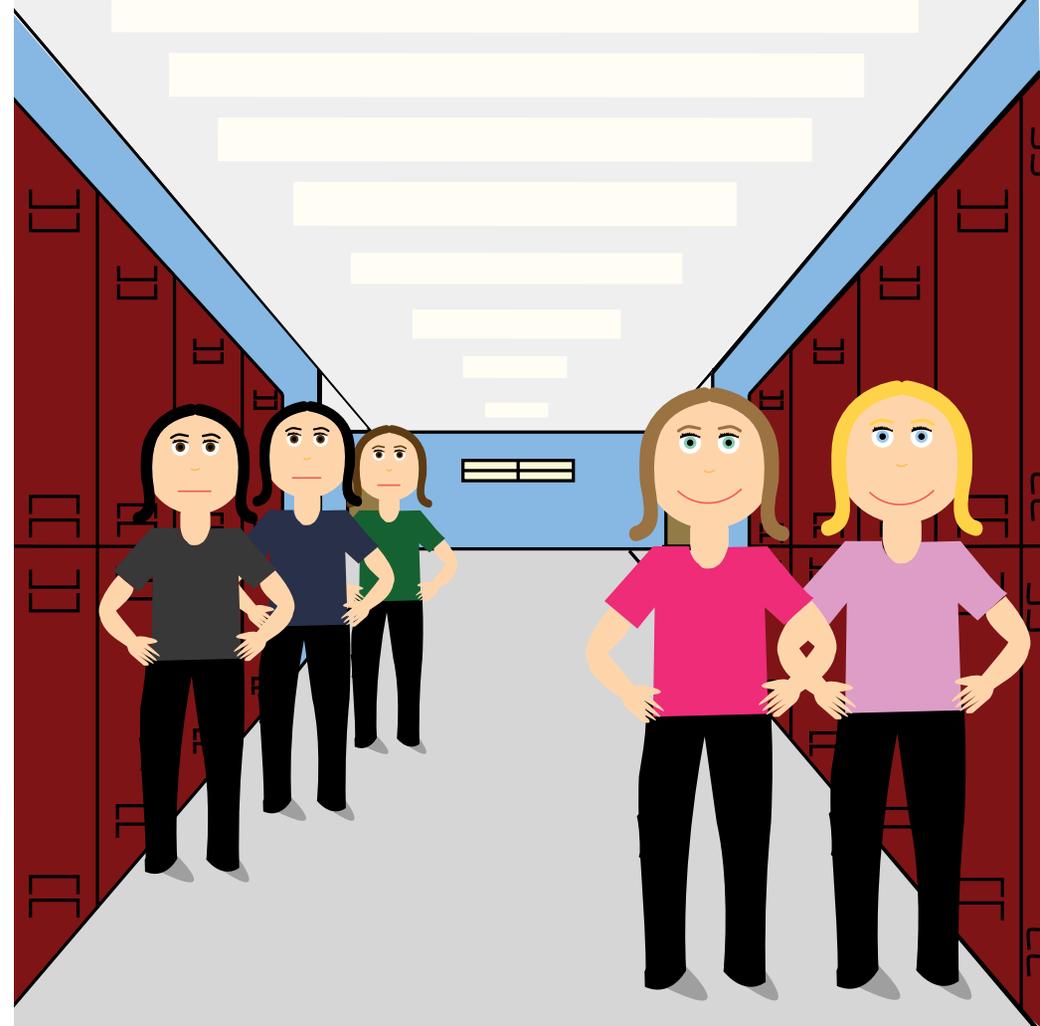

Bella starts talking to them. “Hi, I’m Bella, I’m new. Can I hangout with you guys?” asks Bella.
Ally responds, “ Yeah sure, would you like to sit with us at lunch?”
“Sure!” says Bella.

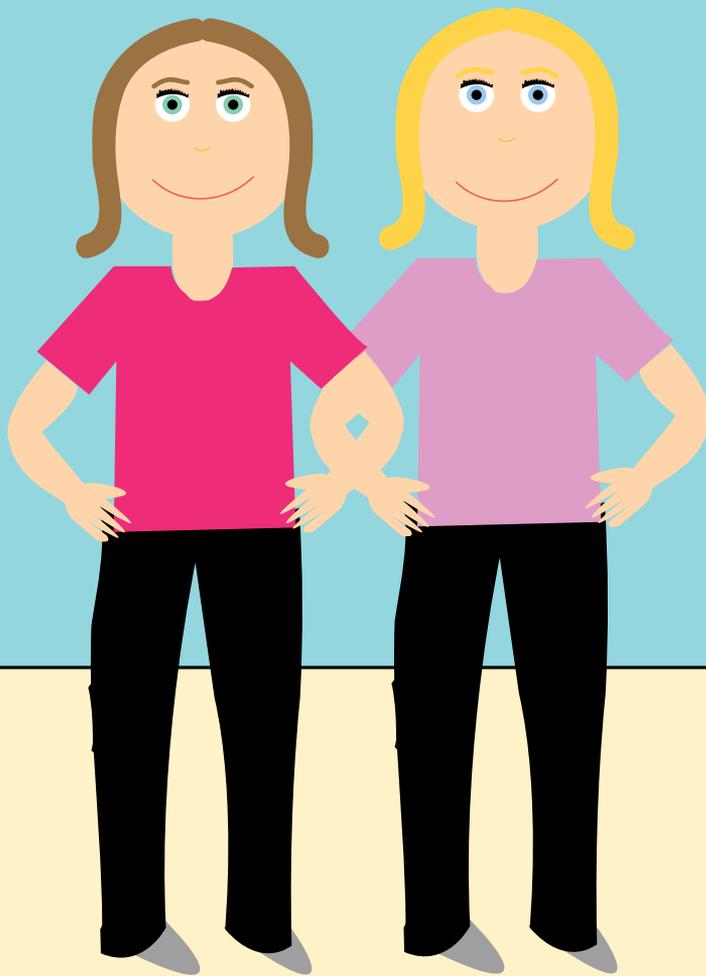

Later on that day at lunch, Bella finds the stars and sits with them. Throughout lunch Ally and the stars make fun of everyone around them, and Bella, trying to fit in, joins in with them.

One day after school, Bella and the stars all gathered at her house. Bella walked away from her room to talk to her mom. She came back and found the girls looking through her yearbook and making fun of people. She realized they were making fun of her best friend from her old school.

The next day at school Bella was at her locker and a girl came up to her. “Hi, my name is Kristina, I’m new. Do you want to be friends?” The stars were near by and saw them talking. Ally got jealous and started talking about her, but it didn’t bother her because she had a new friend.

Bella and Kristina became best friends. Bella realized she doesn't need to change who she is to fit in. Kristina accepted who she was. The stars were still known as the "popular" girls that no one wanted to be friends with because of the way they act.
